LATE NORTHERN INTELLIGENCE. From the Louisville Journal of the 32 ites, the Avgus extracts the following interesting northern Intelligence:

In the Federal Congress, Adjutant-General Thomas states in the committee on ways and means that the Federal army was now 700,000 The Journal says the news from Pittsburg

Landing is of the highest importance and says its transmission northward has been prohibited by Gen. Haileck. Gov. Yates, of Illinois, has furnished two hundred additional surgeons to Gen. Halleck's army. Gen, Grant, in his official report, says that there was too much cowardice exhibited on the part of others at the battle of Pittaburg Ididing. He has had a dozen arrested for cowardice. In he Federal Congress Morr II defended Generals Grant and Smith against the charge of drunkenness. During the debate Mr. Richard son said all those things should be investigated by the military authorities, and if the riot act was read, dispersing Congress, the army would get along much better. The river was falling at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, with seven feet in the change! Weather then, it was because they were untenable against nish than with much aid in this direction. At clear and warm. At Cairo the river was eight the odds. Let no man in the overrun country rumor now prevails that several iron-clad vessels. A portion of the 42th Tennessee regiment, isoners at Camp Douglas, made their arrangemonts to escaps, and were about to carry them into affect, when their designs were frustrated.

The Northern Tax Bill-

A Northern Growt. Unless the North conquers the South by the iddle of the present year, they will be compelled to give up the contest as a hopeless job. Their politicians, their people, and their armies Their politicians, their people, and their armies all expect the straggle to end then, and if it does not, they will be torced to yield from the large a citizen of the State in which he terrible debt which is accomulating against them and their posterity forever. We now impose upon the enemy the disadvantage to which he has heretofore placed upon us. He must now move by land. He must transport his supplies in wagons. He will have to detach troops for defense of his communications. As the enemy lengthens his lines, we condense and concentrate outs, and our strength is thus increased by the very movement that weakens his. We have always thought the government should have rapidly developed every productive interest in the interior. It should have paceunulated supplies, and built workshops at Danille, Atlanta, Tuscaloosa, Favetteville and Lynchburg; rather than at points nearer the neacoust.

It should have finished certain short mile oad ennections at Danville and Chattaneoga, to oncentrate supplies upon the interior depots,

These remarks are suggested by the information that contracts have been made and are he ing carried out in this city, payable only and common of that; whisky, $250 a quart; bank notes. One notable instance is especial! brought to our attention, and we desire to affix upon it promptly the stamp of public reprobaiou. A sale of a gold mine tract in Lumpkin county to a company, some of whom are located in this community, has been effected, on the condition that the payment shall be made in bank notes. Now, it is well known that the M. HALEST NATURES AND DWELDENIG banks have yielded the field of circulation to the Considerate government. They were unwilling to come in competition with it in this respect, at the hazard of creeting discriminations and conflicts of currency. But these trades and contracts specifying bank notes as the preferred currency is doing exactly what the banks desired to avoid, and what it is all important to the public welfare should be avoided.

velfare should be avoided. Many no doubt have in their business transactions acted inconsiderately only. They have made a distinction between Confederate currency and bank currency and bank currency. and bank currency from no deliberate motive to infure the public credit. They have either yielded to the weakness of their own timid minds, or have respected, instead of rebuking, the timidity of others, and thus leveled a blow at the public credit. It is not less true in matters of finance, than of warfare, that fear "betrays like treason." For this reason we desire thus openly to caution the weak as well as the vicious, that assaults upon the credit of the government deserve to be as strongly rebuked as firing into the ranks of our soldiers, or undermining our fortifications In these days of expensive warfare, the power of the purse is not less important than that of the

Indeed, if the financial arm becomes weaken ed, whether by the secret intrigues of enemies in our midst, or the unmanly fears of the weak spirited capitalists, the military arm becomes paralyzed. But if the people remain true to the government, and cherish an abiding faith in the litimate triumph of our cause, the government ocomes triply armed-its means are as boundess as the resources of the entire Confederacyand its triumph as certain as that day succeeds night
